Use of Personal MODEMS on AZnet' NBN Broadband Network.

Dear -----Name-----,

We respect your right to use you own modem as a means of providing connectivity to the NBN Broadband network and if required, the VoIP phone service.

In today's World there is always the ominous threat of your modem being hacked. In a recent audit we found that if you didn't take the simple precaution of changing the industry's supplied default password (admin) then the vulnerability of your modem being hacked, substantially increases.

AZnet wishes to advise that if you are using your own modem with the VoIP option activated then an essential security practice is to change the password from the default "admin" sign in and to NOT enable remote access.

Ultimately the responsibility for using your own modem is yours and as such AZnet seeks your sign concurrence that if your personal modem's VoIP option is Hacked then you indemnify AZnet for all international VoIP call costs.

Alternatively, if you were to agree to use the AZnet supplied modem which, has been configured by us with the appropriate encryption. Then any instances of your modem being hacked would be our responsibility.

Again thank you for your Support of NBN Broadband and we look forward to continually make AZnet a cost effective solution whilst minimizing security vulnerabilities.
